Preface

After the general election in Denmark on 11 March 1998, staff members of the political science departments at the universities of Aalborg, Aarhus and Copenhagen conducted a survey of some 2,000 voters. This was the twelfth survey of consecutive general elections in Denmark since 1971, when the project began, and like its predecessors it was sponsored by the Danish Social Research Council. The interviewing was carried out as personal interviews by A.C. Nielsen-AIM during the period from the election to the beginning of June 1998, and obtained a response rate of 59 per cent.

The present working paper contains a translated version of the questionnaire with variable numbers and unweighted marginal distributions of the respondents. Some variables, mainly open-ended questions, the responses to which are yet to be coded, are left out in the paper and the temporary SPSS file "Denm98.sys" or "Denm98.sav", from which the paper was produced.

If I mention a party that you don't know or don't feel you know enough about, just say so.

V65-V70 Political debate

I shall now read some political statements to you which you may think of as a discussion between two persons, A and B. We ask you to say whether you agree more with A than with B. You may not agree completely with any of them, but just the same we would like to know which of the two views is closer to your own.

V65 First a question about social expenditures. A says: Social reforms have gone too far in this country. More than now, people should manage without social security and support from the public. - B says: Those social reforms that have been made in our country should be

4	Don't know	26	1.3	1.3
	Total	2001	100.0	100.0

V66 Then a question about living standards and incomes. A says: The differences in living standards and incomes are still too great in our country, so people with smaller incomes should have a faster improvement of their living standards than those with larger incomes. - B says: The levelling of incomes has gone far enough. Those income differences that still remain should largely be maintained.

1	Agree with A	941	47.0	47.0

V67 The next question is about state control over the industry. A says: Businessmen and industrial leaders should be entitled to determine their own business to a greater extent. - B says: The state should control and coordinate business life. The public control should at least not be less than it is in Denmark today.

1	Agree with A	1132	56.6	56.6

3	Neither	117	5.8	5.8
4	Don't know	106	5.3	5.3
	Total	2001	100.0	100.0

V68 Then a question about the conditions of banks and big industry in our country. A says: The parliament should decide that the state take over the banks and big industrial enterprises. - B says: The banks and big industries should continue to be on private hands.

1	Agree with A	80	4.0	4.0

3	Neither	54	2.7	2.7

V69 It is also discussed whether the users of public services should pay more. A says: There should be much more users' payments in the public sector. - B says: Apart from small and insignificant areas, there should be no more users' payment.

1	Agree with A	455	22.7	22.7

V70	Then a question about how much one gets out of following the election campaign in the newspapers, tv and the radio. A says: Even if one follows the campaign, one does not get to know much about what the different parties want. - B says: By following the campaign one gets to know quite a lot about what the parties want.

V71 In the last 25 years we have had two main strategies for getting more jobs, namely (1) The welfare strategy, expanding the welfare state with more people publicly employed for old age care, health care and other unmet needs - and (2) The export strategy, putting our stakes on industry and export with high competitive power, and thereby creating service jobs in the industry. - Broadly speaking, which strategy do you think is the best?
